EK Commando Knives

Each EK Commando knife is made from battle proven HCS1718 high-carbon stainless steel. Each blade is heat treated to 1950 degrees F, then plunged to -130 degrees F to create a combat worthy blade. These 6 9/8" blades Rockwell at 57-59, overall length of these knives is 12 1/2". Full tang construction, nothing to go wrong, one solid piece of steel from end to end. Thick brass guards, down swept for comfort, to increase thrusting power and to help prevent jamming the thumb. The waisted blade increases cutting and slashing ability. The extended butt feature provides a multitude of uses such as a pry bar, or defensively, as a "Skullcrasher" pommel. "Top notch" sheaths are designed with the military man and adventurer in mind as they accommodate military pistol belts as well as regular belts. Factory razor sharp edge "right out of the box".

PARA BATTLE KNIFE

Genuine issue to British forces. Stout 7" parkerized blade made from tough N6 high-carbon tool steel. Tough enough that the British airlines carry them on board as a survival knife to hack their own "emergency exit"... This is the latest model which sports two new worthwhile improvements, first, the handles are out of Brazilian Goncalo Alves hardwood, second, the guard is now welded to the tang to make it even sturdier. Handle is proof marked with the Ministry of Defence number and broad arrow and is held secure by oversized copper rivets. 1/4" thick blade, 12 1/4" overall, includes impregnated, riveted leather sheath. Made in England by the British government contractor.
